Eurhythmy was a new experiment done this year by SPArC at Karim City College. This was a novel attempt at combining drama and poetry. The central idea of the poetry drama was to create a scenario where the deceased poets meet a young poet in the coffee house of heaven on the occasion of World Poetry Day and have a conversation about the importance of poetry and the way poetry has changed with the passage of time. The act was designed and scripted to create the illusion of souls conversing in heaven. The set and props played an important role in establishing the act. The play was a power pack of poetry and drama; it was full of entertainment and the musicality of poetry.

The act started with the conversation of the souls, and suddenly they notice a young poet wandering in heaven, and then the drama accelerates. Some souls introduce themselves, while others are recognised by the young poet. The conversation reaches its peak when they mock and laugh at the present worldly scenario. And then to ease the situation, they narrate their poetical tales, and when requested by the young poet, they recite their finest poems. Meanwhile, Rabindranath Tagore enters, igniting everyone with his poem, "Where The Mind Is Without Fear." It was not possible to picturize all the deceased poets, so the students had selected 3 Hindi poets: Nagarjun, Ramdhari Singh Dinkar, and Suryakant Tripathy Nirala; 3 English poets: T.S. Eliot, Sarojini Naidu, and Robert Frost; 3 Urdu poets: Parveen Shakir, Jaun Elia, and Faiz Ahmad Faiz; and there was a special appearance by the Noble Prize-winning Bengali poet, Rabindra Nath Tagore.

The students who enacted the role of the deceased souls were as follows;

English

T.S. Eliot by Manish Mukhi

Robert Frost by Sujain Jaiswal

Sarojini Naidu by Rumaysa Mehboob

Hindi

Ramdhari Singh Dinkar by Bhaskar Jha

Suryakant Tripathi Nirala by Sahdev

Mahato

Nagarjun by Atul Kumar Singh

Urdu

Jaun Elia by Ateef Farhan

Faiz Ahmad Faiz by Inshaal

Parveen Shakir by Urooj Shamshi

Bengali

Rabindranath Tagore by Gourav

Monsoon Melodies 3.0: 25.06.22

Monsoon Melodies is a musical presentation by the SPArC music club that began in the year 2020 during the pandemic to soothe hearts with good music and to mark the onset of monsoon. And this time, for the very first time, Monsoon Melodies was organised offline in the college auditorium on June 25, 2022, at 5 p.m. There is no limitation to music, and music crosses boundaries, entering the hearts of people and healing them. Music is just like a drug—so addictive.

The event started with a welcome song, and chronologically all the singers presented their solo pieces, and the event was a well-rounded amalgamation of music and culture as the songs that were sung all reflected our culture in some way or another. After all the solo performances were over, three duet performances added a spark to the musical celebration. The audience was spellbound and lost in the melody of the evening. The event was supported by the college principal, Dr. Mohammad Reyaz, and the convener of SPArC, Dr. S. M. Yahiya Ibrahim. The event was successfully hosted by Sanskriti and Vallika.
